Office of the Director (OD)		EPSCoR Data Outcomes Portal	Given the depth and breadth of the program, it is important for EPSCoR to ensure progress at the project and programmatic levels. To do this, EPSCoR seeks to collect a variety of different data: participant demographics and career indicators, institutional and individual collaborations, funding, publications, patents, presentations, fellowships, and several other key outcome indicators. For each of these indicators, all details are to be collected, curated, and reported. EPSCoR has OMB clearance to collect this information annually, in addition to the reporting required in the Research Performance Progress Reports (RPPR). EPSCoR is seeking to utilize a system that standardizes collection across and within all of the Research Infrastructure Improvement (RII) Tracks. This will entail developing an online data collection portal, with individual user interfaces at multiple admin levels (individual project participants, FIPRO admin, NSF admin). Depending on the robustness of the portal and admin-level capabilities, EPSCoR may elect to develop a broader analytics-based approach, over a number of phases, to support EPSCoR's project/program assessment needs. 	OIA	Data Analyses to support Envisioning the Future of EPSCoR and other programmatic activities	NSF EPSCoR seeks an individual or group capable of supporting data modeling and statistical analyses related to the Envisioning the Future of EPSCoR activity and other complex programmatic analyses. These analyses will utilize publicly available data from the National Center for Science and Engineering Statistics (NCSES) and internal project/program outcome indicator data to develop jurisdiction-specific models for increasing research competitiveness. Additional analyses will help to support recommendations from the Envisioning the Future of EPSCoR report, Congressional inquiries/reports, and other activities in-line with EPSCoR and NSF priorities. 	OIA	Science and Technology Centers (STC) Integrative Partnerships 2021 strategic planning	The six new STCs, each of which is multi-institutional and comprised of about 30 senior researchers is required to hold a strategic planning meeting involving all senior participants. The goal of this meeting is that the team revisits proposed plans for research, education and knowledge transfer and update the plan consistent with proposed changes/additions during the competition taking into account national and international landscape of science. During the meeting the team needs to refine the center vision and mission statements and agree on priorities, strategies and implementation plan. These discussions will serve as a basis for formalizing center strategic and implementation plan. The strategic planning meeting is envisioned as an equivalent of a two day in person meeting with full team participation. Considering the potential complications with pandemic, the meetings may be developed by combining virtual and in person interactions as appropriate. The role of the contractor is to work with the leadership of each center and develop plan for the meeting and moderate scheduled sessions including breakouts where appropriate. During the meeting the contractor needs to collect information that emerges through these sessions and make it available post meeting to center leadership. It is expected that the contractor will work also with NSF staff responsible for each center oversight when developing meeting plans with the leadership of the specific center. It is expected that all six strategic planning meetings have similar structure, however, in each case the structure has to be adapted to the specific needs of the center team.
