

Dr. Brett M. Baker

Dr. Brett M. Baker has served as the Assistant Inspector General for Audit (AIGA) at the National Science Foundation Office of Inspector General (OIG) since 2010. He has previously served as the AIGA at the Department of Commerce OIG, the Director for Internal Review with the Defense Finance and Accounting Service, and the Director for Systems Internal Audit at the Department of Education OIG.

Dr. Baker earned a PhD in Information Technology Management at the University of Maryland University College and a master's degree in Information Resource Management at Central Michigan University. He holds a B.A. in Accounting from the University of Northern Iowa and a B.S in Sociology from Iowa State University. Dr. Baker is also a Certified Public Accountant (CPA) and Certified Information Systems Auditor (CISA). He is currently the Chair of the Federal Audit Executive Council, and a member of GAO's Green Book Advisory Council, and the National Intergovernmental Audit Forum Strategic Planning Committee.