

David Mayo

Director, Office of Sponsored Research
California Institute of Technology

David Mayo is the Director of the Office of Sponsored Research at the California Institute of Technology. In this capacity he is responsible for pre-award and post-award non-financial services supporting $390M in research awards annually. David is directly responsible for review and interpretation of existing and emerging government policies and regulations, development of institutional policies and procedures, and development and implementation of training programs for campus staff in the area of research administration. Prior to his appointment at Caltech in 2002, David led the pre-award office at the University of California, Santa Barbara, where he worked in research administration in various capacities since 1981.

David has been a member of his professional association, the National Council of University Research Administrators (NCURA) since 1988 and currently serves on its Board of Directors. David served as NCURA President in 2008, received its Distinguished Service Award in 2009, and received NCURA's highest honor in 2012, the Outstanding Achievement in Research Administration Award. David has served on numerous NCURA working groups and committees. He is a content creator for NCURA's on-line and in-person training programs, as well as a frequent presenter at its national and regional conferences on topics such as: federal and industry contracting, regulatory compliance, subcontracting, subrecipient monitoring and award management. David currently participates in the Federal Demonstration Partnership, for which he co-chairs its Contracts Subcommittee and is a member of its Subawards Subcommittee. David also participates in the Council on Governmental Relations as a member of its COVID-19 Federal Award Impact Workgroup.
